POSITIVE REAL RATES

- The US government now pays around 2% in real terms to borrow at a ten-year horizon, up from -1% at the end of 2021.
- Real yields are now around or above 2% at all maturity lengths.
- In Germany, ten-year real borrowing costs are now in positive territory, having been less than -2% at the end of 2021.
- Because this increase is in yields that adjust for inflation, this will not mechanically reverse once inflation returns to target levels.

CHINESE FOREIGN DIRECT INVESTMENT CRASHES!

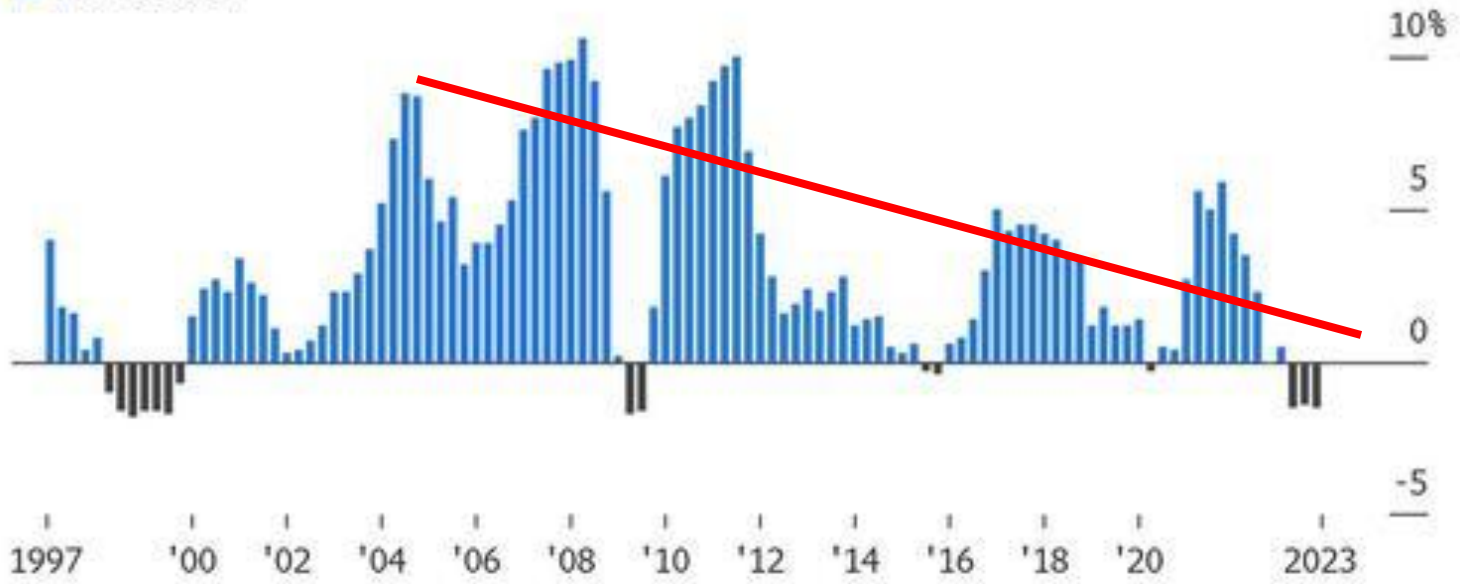

As much as the US economy is almost completely dependent on consumer consumption (~70% of US GDP is Consumption), China with much lower consumption is highly dependent on Capital Formation (~43% of GDP). This has become a very serious problem for China as Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) support has quite literally "fallen off a cliff"!
